The ill-natured are never well, they are "bilious," the system is clogged, the machinery does not work well, and both mind and body are disordered. The safest and best method of getting rid of biliousness is steady work in the CARDS. CA open air, for six or eight hours every day, working or exercising to the extent of keeping up a gentle moisture on the skin. This moisture conveys the bile away out of the system. The same result will be accomplished, but not so well, by a good steam bath, or by wrapping up in bed, drinking hot tess, thus "getting up a perspiration" but the atmosphere of the room should be pure. and the diet for several days should consist of coarse bread and fruits. means have failed.

The office of the liver is to withdraw the bile from the blood. It is the largest workshop of the body, and is at the right side about the large edge of the right side, about the lower edge of the rego, Austerlitz, Jena, Friedland, Wag ribs. When it does not do its work ram and Moskewa, which recall the glory it is said to be "torpid"—asleep— of your fathers, and tell you, their and medicines are given to stimulate it, descendants, what France has a right to wake it up, make it act, work faster than common, so as to throw off the excess of bile. When it does not withdraw or separate the bile from the blood the skin grows yellow, also the whites of the eyes, and the man has "yellow jaundice." When it separates the bile from the blood but it retains it within itself. the blood, but it retains it within itself, constipation ensues, appetite is lost, spirits become despondent, and the person is languid, lazy, fretful and irritable. The liver is in a sense like a sponge, and the bile may be pressed out of it as water out of a sponge, by pressing the ball of the hand over the region of the liver downward, from hip to "pit of stomach," two or three minutes at a time, several times a day. This is a good remedy in dyspepsia, and also re-lieves the stomach of wind, giving im-mediate and grateful relief sometimes.

Edward Bates and the President. From the St. Louis Republican.]

One of the most interesting events con-nected with the stay of the President in nected with the stay of the President in St. Louis, was the occasion of his visit to the ex Attorney General of the United States. Hos. Edward Bates. It is known to most of our citizens that the health of Mr. Bates is very precarious. He is suffering from a disease of the lungs that is hable to prodube deafh at almost any hour. On Sunday, at one o'clock, according to a previous arrange meat, Capt. James B. Eads called at the Linden House for the President, Secretary Seward and Secretary Wells, and with them proceeded to the house of Mr. Bates. The latter seemed much affected on seeing his distinguished associates, on seeing his distinguished associates, on seeing his distinguished associates, and thanked them most feelingly for their visit to one who, he said, was a dying man. He spoke, however, with the greatest cheerfulness of his expected dissolution. Having lived three score years and thirteen, he had three more years than he was entitled to. His re-marks to Mr. Seward were exceedingly touching. He had never expected to see him alive again, and this was just so much clear gain for him. Mr. Welles he addressed as one who was near to him by ties of friendship and mutual trial beyond what he could express. He spoke to the President as one who had a greater weight of cares and responsibilities than any lifty men in the nation, and thanked God for believing that he was one of the most worthy that could have been selected to perform his obligations to the whole country.

The President at parting assured Mr. Bates that his interview with him at Washington was fresh in his memory, as well as each word of good advice and en-couragement he had then given him, and that he could not express the pleasure it gave him of having it in his power now to do himself the honor of calling to see

The parting of Mr. Bates and Mr. Seward was exceedingly touching, but the kind words of each cannot be te called. The eyes of both were moistened, and the deep feelings with which all four of these great statesmen were affected will long be remembered by those who witnessed their farewell visit to the revered and honored patriot of Missouri.

A Napoleonic Hint to Prussia Paris (August 27) Corresponden cof the Lon on Times.

When the troops of the Camp of Chalons were reviewed for the last time before breaking up and returning to their respective quarters, Marshal Regnaud de St. Jean d'Angely addressed them in a speech which to ordinary apprehension contains nothing extraordinary, but in which some who were surprised at the ready acquiescence of the Emperor Napoleon in M. de Bismark's arrangements love to detect the germ of a future collisuch an occasion. On handing their colors to the carbineers and cuirassiers, he entrusted them, he said, in the name of the Emperor, and by his order, to their patriotism and their devotedness. You read upon them the names of Maram and Moskewa, which recall the glory guide you to victory, and with heads erect you will show them to the enemy, with the sacred cey of Vice t Empereur!

Perhaps the speaker might have contented himself with alluding generally to the martial renown of the French army, without specifying any particular instance. Marengo was gained over the Austrians; Austerlitz, "the battle of the three Emperors," over the Austrians and Russians; but why remind Prussia, flushed with recent victories, and believing herself invincible, how low she was brought by one of the most sanguinary victories which the first Napoleon ever won? How prostrate she lay at the feet of the man whom she had defied? This marked allusion to Jena by the Commander-in-Chief of the Camp of Chalons. in a speech said to be penned by the Emperor, will not evoke any very agreeable sentiments in the breasts of the Prassians, in their present temper, to-wards the French.

Herschol V. Johnson on the Philadelphia Convention. Herschel V. Johnson—who will be remembered as the candidate of the Douglas Democracy for Vice President in 1860—has written a letter dated Augusta, Georgia, September 1, on the Philadel phia Convention, in which he says Although I felt the necessity of some means of bringing the conservative men of the North and the people of the South into co-operation, yet I doubted the ex-pediency of the call for the Philadelphia Convention. After it was called I was very timidly in favor of sending delegates, fearing that the passions en-gendered by the war had not sufficiently subsided to admit of harmony in council and wisdom in action. I am glad that my misgivings have been disappointed and I believe much good has been done and progress made toward restoring harmony upon the basis of the Constitu-tion. Though not all which I could wish, yet more than I expected, was done With the spirit, tone and, in the main hundred and lifty costumes worn in the piece; for six months before it was played forty-two carpenters, blacksmiths, locksmiths, etc., were employed, making the machines and scenes. The dry goods bill for silk and golden goods bought in London and Lyons is $13,000; the stocking, net cost. $3650; the embroidery, $4000; the ornaments (made by Granger), $1880; the shoes, $2020; the bonnets, etc., $1500; flowers, $1220; belts, to accept them in the spirit that gave them form and utterance, and ignore whatsoever is distasteful, as a tribute to the generous enthusiasm of the patriotic body from which they emanated.

Jackson and Johnson.

The Philadelphia Age, under the head of "Strange Coincidence," furnishes the following facts in the lives of the two Tennessee Presidents: "Andrew Jackson was born in North Carolina, emigrated to Tennessee, and was elected President of the United States. During his administration the opposition were wonderfully exercised because he dared remove men from office who opposed the government.

Andrew Johnson was also born in North Carolina, emigrated to Tennessee, and is now President of the United States. The opposition are just now wonderfully exercised about his removing men from office who are now opposed to 'the government.' Philadelphia was the only city in the Union whose municipal authorities refused to extend hospitalities to General Jackson on his visit to the West, and Philadelphia is the only city whose municipal authorities refused to extend hospitalities to Andrew Johnson on his visit to the West.

"But the people of Philadelphia turned out en masse to welcome Andrew Jackson, and by a decided vote at the polls sternly rebuked the municipal authorities for their contemptible meanners. The people of Philadelphia also turned out en masse to welcome Andrew Johnson and will administer a similar rebuke to the present municipal authorities at the ballot box. Strange coincidences some-times happen in this wicked world of ours."
